

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

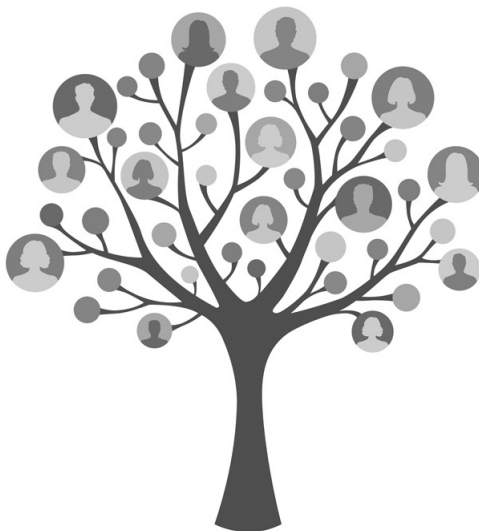

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Tell me how much you understand about emotions!

Learning Outcome

Describe necessity, duty, advice, or strong disapproval in written and spoken situations according to work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about education and character traits.
- I can express what is and isn't necessary in the past.
- I can accurately explain and support my ideas.

Ask your partner:

- What is your definition of emotional intelligence?
- Do you think emotional intelligence is important? Why or why not?

Let's Explore!

Vanessa and Will talk about emotional intelligence

* "Emotional intelligence", is the ability to recognize emotions, then use that to help guide how you think and behave.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Will: So, Vanessa, if I understand correctly, emotional intelligence is the ability to perceive emotions, self-regulate your own emotions and reflect on your emotional experiences?
- Vanessa: Yes. You have the right idea. All in all, it is the way we process emotional information and it helps us to navigate our social sphere a little better. So how about you, Will? It was probably tough that you had to go to boarding school at ten. What was your experience like, and how did it impact your ability to manage your emotions?
- Will: For one thing, I was a shy kid and I became pretty introspective, because the first year at boarding school was lonely. I had one or two friends but I spent a lot of time reading, so I began to have a bit more time for self-reflection.
- Vanessa: That sounds lonely! What type of strategies did you have to adapt in order to help yourself?
- Will: I think I accepted that I was just introverted and that I had to survive the first year or two reading a lot of books.
- Vanessa: What realization did you come to?
- Will: I realized that though I was somewhat introverted, I also craved to be socially involved. That's when I felt I had to try acting and I began to really learn about my emotions, but above all, going to a therapist helped me discriminate between my reactions and my ability to control them without compromising my feelings ... Vanessa, how about you? How did you first learn to manage your emotions?
- Vanessa: I was pretty dramatic as a teenager, and I had to be around people. With respect to self-reflection, I kept a journal and spent time alone cooking. I always took time for myself but knew that my relationships were valuable too.

Let's Practice!

Vanessa and Will are talking about their education and personalities.

Instructions: Read the dialogue and underline all the expressions related to character traits and education.

Will: So, Vanessa, if I understand correctly, emotional intelligence is the ability to perceive emotions, self-regulate your own emotions and reflect on your emotional experiences?

Vanessa: Yes. You have the right idea. All in all, it is the way we process emotional information and it helps us to navigate our social sphere a little better. So how about you, Will? It was probably tough that you had to go to boarding school at ten. What was your experience like, and how did it impact your ability to manage your emotions?

Let's Practice!

Will explains what was necessary for him to overcome shyness.

Instructions: Read the paragraph. Underline the expression that can be replaced with the expressions from the Word Bank. Use capital letters where necessary. Rewrite the paragraph in the lines below.

Word Bank

helped me discriminate / above all / I realized that / had to survive / I think I accepted

I believe I understood that I was just introverted and that I had to go through the first two years reading a lot of comics and seeing lots of movies. I comprehended that even though I was somewhat introverted, I also craved to be socially involved. Most of all, going to a therapist led me decide between my reactions and my ability to control them without compromising my feelings.

Extension Activity

Do an emotional intelligence questionnaire online.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Discuss with a partner how emotionally intelligent you are and why.
- Go online and find a questionnaire on emotional intelligence.
- Do the test.
- Discuss your results with a partner.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I talk about character traits.

☐ ☐

I read and answer questions online about my character.

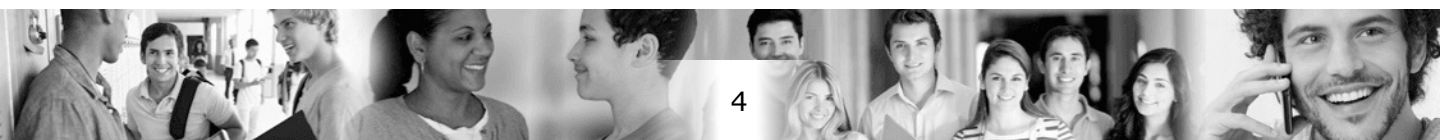

☐ ☐

I discuss the results with someone.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- emotional intelligence (noun): understanding of the emotions you and other people experience
e.g. Emotional intelligence is the ability to perceive emotions, self-regulate your own emotions and reflect on your emotional experiences.
- to perceive (verb): to understand; to become aware e.g. If I understand correctly, emotional intelligence is the ability to perceive emotions.
- to self-regulate (verb): to control your own feelings and reactions
e.g. You can self-regulate so you don't react too strongly.
- social sphere (noun): the people you know socially
e.g. Emotional intelligence helps us to navigate our social sphere a little better.
- boarding school (noun): a school that also provides room and board e.g. It was probably tough that you had to go to boarding school at ten.
- introspective (noun): the ability to see and understand oneself e.g. I was a shy kid and I became pretty introspective.
- self-reflection (noun): the act of looking at and understanding your motives and reactions
e.g. I spent a lot of time reading, and I began to have a bit more time for self-reflection.
- therapist (noun): a person who helps people with psychological matters
e.g. I began to really learn about my emotions by going to a therapist.
- to discriminate between (verb): to tell the difference between or decipher two or more things
e.g. My therapist helped me discriminate between my reactions and my ability to control them without compromising my feelings.

Learning Points

Expressing Necessity in the Past

You use the modal have to to express necessity in the past.

You use the negative forms of the modals need to and have to to express absence of necessity in the present.

You can only express necessity in the past with the modal have to.

Structure:

subject + had to + infinitive

Example:

I was introverted and I had to survive the first year of university reading a lot of books.

Absence of necessity is expressed with the negative form of have to in the past.

To express absence of necessity in the past, you use the structure:

subject + didn't + have/need + infinitive

Example:

I was outgoing as a kid, so I didn't have to try hard to be comfortable around people.

Absence of necessity can also be expressed by negative form of need.

Examples:

- You had to go to boarding school at ten.
- Did you have to adapt in order to help yourself?
- I had to be around people all the time.

Learning Points

Using Contrast Connectors to Explain and Supporting Your Ideas

You use contrast connectors to express your position and to show another point of view.

Connectors can show a connection to what you want to say and what was said before. They can also show your position and opinion on a particular situation.

Contrast connectors are usually placed at the beginning of a sentence and provide a contrast with a previous statement or sentence.

Structure:

Initial Sentence. Contrast Connector, + phrase.

Look at the chart for some common contrast connectors:

However	On the other hand
In contrast	By comparison
Nevertheless	On the contrary
Nonetheless	Instead
Yet	In any case

